

SACRAMENTO DAILY RECORD-UNION.

VOLUME LXI.—NO. 56.

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS

This Week!

WE ARE NOW SHOWING A MOST ATTRACTIVE ASSORTment of Ladies' Parasols. We received them direct from the manufacturers, which enables us to give you greater value than we could if purchased from jobbers. The variety consists of all the new colors and shades, with the latest designs in walking-stick handles, La Tosca, Umbras and Pactermos.

Plain Black Silk Parasols..... $1 25
Plain Satin Parasols, in different shades..... $1 50 and up
Plain Black Silk, extra quality of material..... $1 50 and up
Extra fine Black Silk, La Tosca handles..... $3 95 and up
Silk Parasols, extra heavy quality, fancy stripes in different shades..... $4 95 and up
Black Gold-headed Parasols in different sizes..... $2 50 and up

MOQUET RUGS.

For $1 a handsome Moquet Rug, bright colors, panel design, fringed ends, 45x20, both sides alike.
For 68 cents Moquet Rugs, 3x18, fringed ends, reversible mixed colors, $1 75 Moquet Rugs. A beauty. Handsome bright colors, knotted fringed ends, both sides alike and extra heavy, 6x27.
For $3 extra heavy Moquet Rugs, mottled design, 7x36; reversible, with knotted fringed ends.

NEW GOODS JUST PLACED IN STOCK.

One case White Lawns, at 5 cents per yard.
Two cases Sateen-finished Prints, in large and small flower designs, 14 yards for $1.
One case Challis, in new and neat designs, 14 yards for $1.
One case Plain and Laced Striped White Plaques, 10 and 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ cents.

RED HOUSE,
Nos. 714 and 716 J Street,
AND 718 and 715 OAK AVENUE. SACRAMENTO, CAL.

THE NONPAREIL.

Series of One-Hour Sales
Daily Between 9 and 10 A. M.

THIS MORNING FOR ONE HOUR ONLY!

DRESS GOODS DEPARTMENT.
20 Pieces 38-inch TRICOT, Summer shades, tans and grays, splendid quality, 25 CENTS.

DOMESTIC DEPARTMENT.

20 Bolts Bleached MUSLIN, yard-wide, soft-finished (no starch), 5 CENTS A YARD.

CLOAK DEPARTMENT.
32 SPRING JACKETS, new, neat and stylish, $2 EACH.

HOISIERY DEPARTMENT.

20 Dozen Children's black ribbed HOSE, finished, 8 CENTS A PAIR.

WE BEG TO INFORM PEOPLE WHO INTEND TO PATRONIZE
THESE SALES THAT UNDER NO
CONSIDERATION WILL WE SELL SALE GOODS SOONER
THAN 9 NOR LATER THAN 10 A. M.

THE NONPAREIL,

CORNER OF FIFTH AND J STREETS, SACRAMENTO.

Agents for Butterick's Patterns.

SACRAMENTO, MONDAY MORNING, APRIL 29, 1889.

WHOLE NO. 11,835.

NEW TO-DAY.

Advertisements of Meeting Notices, Wines, Lots, For Sale, To Let and similar notices under this head are inserted for 5 cents per line the first and 3 cents per line each subsequent time. All notices of this character will be found under this heading.

Stated Assembly of Sacramento County, 1st, Royal and Select Masters will be held at the Royal and Select Masters' EVENING, at 7:30 o'clock, Soprano and Companions cordially invited. By order of JOHN HURLEY, T. I. M. W. B. DAVIS, Recorder.

WANTED—A PORTER FOR BARBER SHOP. Apply at 214 J Street. 1st

WANTED—MAN OF TEMPERATE AND steady habits, seeking employment in the State. Salary $70 to $100 per month. References: Manufacturers Sup., 101 1/2 State St., N. Y.

FOR SALE—FURNITURE OF SEVEN ROOMS cheap. Apply after 8:30 P. M. at 224 J Street. 1st

FOR SALE—A FRESH YOUNG COW, 21/2 years; also a gentle, business horsemanship, sound. 1827 H street. 1st

WANTED—LOST—FOUND.

WANTED—A GERMAN OR AMERICAN WOMAN to do light housework. Apply at 1215 K street.

WANTED—A MILKER AND BUTTER LADY, either single or married, to work on a large ranch, man to run a ranch, yards and hop ranches, a man to run a ranch, female to wash, eight girls for various work. Apply at 1215 K street, Post Office, Fourth and K streets, Sacramento.

WANTED—VIOLIN PUPILS, FIRST-CLASS FLAT. For terms inquire of GEORGE FRANCIS Leader, Choral and Metropolitan Father Orchestra, or at Hammer's music store, 230 J street.

FOR SALE—TO LET.

TO RENT—TWO CENTRAL MODERN OFFICES; electric light. 1010 J street. 1st

FOR SALE—LOT 100, 1/4 MILE NEW HOUSE; fruit all kinds, it is not sold. Rent 125. 1519 Fourth street. 1st 1709 THIRD STREET—PEASANT UNFURNISHED ROOMS, suitable for light housekeeping with bath. A pair of 12^{1/2} x 18^{1/2} feet.

TO LET—TWO UNFURNISHED ROOMS, kitchen and bathroom, over Fabian Bros. Store, corner Ninth and J streets. 1st

FOR SALE—NO. 1 HAY WILL, 1000 SOLD cheap. Inquire at 214 J street. 1st

TO LET—HANDSOME FURNISHED FRONT ROOMS, in suit or single, at the CLARENCE HOUSE, 1519 1/2 J street, also fine rooms for housekeeping. 1st

FOR SALE—THREE ACRES OF LAND ON J-street, 1/2 acre, walk from Third Street. Barn and house, 1000 feet from the present heavy rain-soaked appearance into a veritable picture of lightness and life.

The arch is also being fitted with colored electric lights, and at night it will present a picture of beauty.

The First Presbyterian Church, between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, will be utilized for an immense stand, and the Presbyterian building, on the other side of the way, will be used for a large hall.

Up at the corner of Fourteenth street the grand army first attracts attention with its trophy flags over each window, and flags over every sill.

The large Hayne apartment house, on the corner of Fifteenth street, is handsomely decorated.

At the corner of Twenty-first street the Soutern Reform Church is filled with stores.

MILITARY TOUR OF INSPECTION.

WASHINGTON, April 28th.—Lieutenant-Commander William H. Parker of the U. S. Navy, who has been ordered to join the Ironclad "Tuscarora" at San Francisco, has arrived in this city ever since his marriage to Miss Jenkins, daughter of Rear-Admiral Jenkins of the navy at 1749 F street, where his trophy flags were flying over each window during his tour. He will start the second half of the week in company with Lieutenant Summer C. Paine, who will be the Navigator of the vessel.

Private residences, innumerable and numerous, the club-houses on both Avenues are also in the neighborhood, and the Union Club will be finished to-morrow. Such was the Union Club, in the completion of the decoration of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, but it is not known when the arch will be finished.

The Hoffman House, 1519 1/2 K street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the largest and most impossible, while lower, building, and Wall street was packed.

The crowd was drawn to Wall street and vicinity to view the scene of the decorations of the new Union Club buildings and the Custom House.

To-night the finishing touches are being put on the pier at the foot of Wall street, where the President will land to-morrow.

The Union Club, in the completion of the arch at the Washington, D. C. street, is the

DAILY RECORD-UNION

MONDAY, APRIL 29, 1889.

PUBLISHED BY THE
SACRAMENTO PUBLISHING COMPANY.Publication Office, Third st., bet. J and K.
THE DAILY RECORD UNION
published every day of the week, Sundays excepted. Double-sheet on Saturdays.For one year.....$6.00
For six months.....$3.00
For three months.....$2.00

Subscribers served at Carriers at Fifteen Cents per copy. Postage on letters and towns the paper can be had at the principal Periodical Dealers, Newsmen and agents.

THE WEEKLY UNION
Is the cheapest and most desirable Home, News and Literary Journal published on the Pacific Coast, One Year.....$2.00

Entered at the Postoffice at Sacramento as second-class matter.

The death of President Barnard, of College College, removed from the stage of human activity one of the foremost educators and scientists of the world. It will always be a matter of pride with the American that his country produces such men as Dr. Barnard, who by their scholarship and genius reflect credit upon the nation and give it importance in the eyes of the eminent men the world over. Professor Barnard was a many-sided man; his abilities were not confined to a single or a few lines of study or research. Besides being one of the most distinguished of our mathematicians, he was also a prominent educator of the deaf and dumb, a student of natural philosophy, a skilled chemist, a distinguished writer on grammar, and an astronomer of sufficient importance to be chosen one of the Government Commissioners to observe the eclipse of the sun in Labrador. He was selected to represent the nation at the Paris Exposition of 1878, as he had been also for that of 1867. He was given the important trust of publishing the charts of the United States Coast Survey; he was made one of the Board of Experts of the American Bureau of Mines; President of the American Association for the Advancement of Science; was a corporator of the National Academy of Sciences, and for a time Foreign Secretary of that body. A graduate of Yale, he saw service also as a teacher in the Connecticut Asylum for the Deaf and the Dumb, filled a chair in the University of Alabama, and likewise in the University of Mississippi. He became President of Columbia in 1864, and filled the position to the day of his death at the ripe old age of 80 years, with his powers little impaired and his name in the first rank with the most eminent men of science in the world. His writings and publications are numerous, and the books and essays that bear his name as author are everywhere recognized as standard. He was a man of all others who possessed the art of popularizing scientific study and inviting to it classes of readers who, without such a leader as he proved, would never undertake it.

At the time the objections were raised to the article in the Century on the Samoan question, the RECORD-UNION suggested that the probable fact was that the article was written and sold to the Century long before Mr. Bates had any idea he would be appointed to sit in judgment on the Commission. Moreover, that it was probable that the article had gone to press before the appointment was made. We now have dispatches from Berlin, saying that Mr. Bates has called upon Prince Bismarck and stated that the Century article was not only written before the appointment, but it was in type, printed off and beyond recall when the President appointed Mr. Bates, proving that our conjecture was correct. It is referred to not simply to point a moral concerning a disposition on the part of many of the press to hastily judge. Any ordinary newspaper man ought to be able to calculate about how long prior to the issuance of the usual monthly magazine the matter for it is put into print. Had this been done by the journalists who hastened to condemn Commissioner Bates, they would have discovered that he was not guilty of the impropriety of writing an essay on a subject upon which he knew he was to sit in a judicial capacity.

LORD DUNRAVEN talks like a man. He declares that it is not the part of the challenger to find fault with the boats that are to be sailed against his. He challenged America to beat his yacht, the Valkyrie, for the America's cup; the New York Yacht Club took up the glove, and all he has to do now is to meet any vessel the American's chose to pit against him. His own yacht is but seventy feet in length, while the Volunteer is eighty-six, and he therefore a decided advantage, for she will wear against the wind better, and make less leeway. But as against this view of the case, it is to be borne in mind that the contest is to take place over the outside course, and that the English yacht is built for that kind of rough work, while the Volunteer has not proved as good a sailor in heavy water as on the inside course.

The excess of immigration into Oklahoma is already being made manifest in the suffering of the unfortunate who arrived there without means sufficient to support their families until they could gain a foothold in the new country. These people must be relieved. No matter that they were warned against going out unsupported, or that they have been foolish in attempting to settle in a new country without provision against disappointment; they are suffering, and that ought to be enough to start trains of supplies rolling westward for their relief. The rich East cannot afford to have these people starve, or women and little children suffer for want of clothing and shelter.

It is very gratifying to notice that the news reports give every reason to believe that the Centennial Celebrations in the principal cities of the Union will be commensurate with the importance of the event. There were fears for a time that the people were apathetic upon the subject, but the latent patriotism of the nation has been aroused, and now all the indications are that the observances of the 30th will be of a character to impress the Powers of the world with a true sense of the devotion of the American people to their free institutions, and that the republican grows in strength as it grows in age.

Some of our contemporaries have already entered upon the publication of alleged illustrations of the inauguration of Washington. If there is anything that the people of our San Francisco contemporaries to present pictures related to the great historic event must have made the bones of the Father of the Country turn in the tomb.

IN RELIGION'S REALM.
DISCOURSES ON THE WASHINGTON CENTENARY.

Christianity Not Antagonistic to Government—A Glance at the Country's Progress—Excuse.

At the First Unitarian Society's services yesterday the choir, composed of Miss Felt, Miss Wheat and Messrs. Bavers, Clark and Desmond, rendered excellent music. Miss Gerrish, the organist, being assisted by Mr. Ball and Mr. Costello in instrumentation. A Te Deum was sung as an opening piece, after which all the music was of a patriotic character. Rev. C. P. Massey spoke from the text, Genesis vi. 4: "There were giants on the earth in those days." He first alluded to the centennial observances, which, extending over a period of fifteen years, and marking all the events of our revolutionary struggle, from the assembling of the Continental Congress, in 1774, had thus contributed to enable the national traditions to every patriot here. The event, to which this is the day of observance, two days in advance of the secular occasion, was intended to give the sanction of religion, was an event eminently proper for it, as it is the theme of religion—duty for it was the theme of the country's progress, to inspire us with those gentler virtues which have filled play in the everyday and ordinary walks of human existence. The patriotic scenes were more memorable than those of war, and with the exception of the inauguration of the first President of any American Government that could be called a national, it seemed that the nation had a more ardent and ardent desire to be chosen one of the Government Commissioners to observe the eclipse of the sun in Labrador. He was selected to represent the nation at the Paris Exposition of 1878, as he had been also for that of 1867. He was given the important trust of publishing the charts of the United States Coast Survey; he was made one of the Board of Experts of the American Bureau of Mines; President of the American Association for the Advancement of Science; was a corporator of the National Academy of Sciences, and for a time Foreign Secretary of that body. A graduate of Yale, he saw service also as a teacher in the Connecticut Asylum for the Deaf and the Dumb, filled a chair in the University of Alabama, and likewise in the University of Mississippi. He became President of Columbia in 1864, and filled the position to the day of his death at the ripe old age of 80 years, with his powers little impaired and his name in the first rank with the most eminent men of science in the world. His writings and publications are numerous, and the books and essays that bear his name as author are everywhere recognized as standard. He was a man of all others who possessed the art of popularizing scientific study and inviting to it classes of readers who, without such a leader as he proved, would never undertake it.

The paper closed by saying: "May the almighty God bless the cause of Jesus in His Christ form us more to the amiable temper he recommended, that we may prove the strength of our minds by the superior knowledge with which we bear the weight of our country's burdens, and seek the noble pleasure of ministering to neighbors for their good and to their edification. Let the generous self-denial of our great and good be reflected over our eyes, and let us endeavor to repeat the lowly course of others, instead of seeking a high state of civilization, there being all kinds of evil in the world." The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely exalted above us, so modestly and unostentatiously did he seek not himself. But him, when he touched us, we could not bear to let go of him, lowly as we were. The grounds before the church, which is nearly intersected in the mutual tenderness of its members for each other. Secondly, and surely, we must be disposed to look towards our brethren; for we are all brothers, and we are to be brothers in Christ, our great and divine Master, though so infinitely

